10:45hrs - Vallée de Mai

“The garden of Eden” It was declared the World Heritage Site by UNESCO in 1984. Home to the Coco-de-Mer, vanilla orchids, lizards and some of the world’s rare birds such as the Black Parrot. Leave, for a moment, Seychelles’ bright sunlight aside and enter the primeval glade of Praslin’s legendary Vallée de Mai, where the world-renowned Coco de Mer, the world’s largest nut, grows high on ancient 40-metre palms. This mysterious forest, General Gordon of Khartoum believed to be the original site of the Garden of Eden with the Coco de Mer as its forbidden fruit. Even today, as you stroll the Vallée’s well-marked paths, studying the bewitching patterns of light and shade and listening to the haunting calls of rare endemic birds, you can be forgiven for believing that you have stumbled upon Nature’s most secret realm.

Our guided tour of the Vallée will reveal the mysteries of a twilight world that bustles with life from the carpet of leaves of the forest floor to the canopy above, inhabited by diminutive frogs, lizards, stick insects, chameleons, 6 species of endemic palm, and the Seychelles Black Parrot - one of the rarest birds to be found anywhere on earth.”
